Hope For War

A modern furniture factory at Sledge, a small community in the heart of the cotton-growing Delta, probably would have been under way long before the migration of labor from the plantations in the industrial centers of the North.

The man responsible for the project—Latavia Furniture Manufacturing Company—is Harry Howze, a graduate in agriculture, manager of a 1600-acre plantation, and an aggressive young man in his thirties whose sales ability has sparked the 2-year business into sudden modest but rapid success.

Howze returned to Sledge in 1945 after a long stay in the North and first company and took over the plantation of his father-in-law on the latter's death, managing it for himself and his five sisters. Cotton at that time was the principal crop.

Shortly after the war, however, the negro tenants on his place started drifting North, as was the case in many other sections of the Delta. By 1948 the farm labor situation had become so acute that a neighbor of Howze, Col. A. T. Calhoun of Sledge, decided while in Germany to transport several hundred Latvians to Mississippi as farm laborers on his place.

Howze, quick to recognize the possibility of solving the labor problem, offered in the Spring of 1949 to assume responsibility for 25 of the families with the provision that they remain with him for a year's trial.

The bewildered, fear-ridden refugees, who first came from the German invasion then from the Russians, arrived in New Orleans with little more than the clothes they wore. A few spoke a little broken English, the others none. Howze met them, gave them their first meals, and carried them to their new American homes at Sledge, a strange land compared to Latvia, which in climate and terrain corresponds to Minnesota.

The farm houses which had been occupied previously by negro and white tenants were turned over to the newcomers, and Howze agreed to furnish all materials and tools, provided the occupants fixed up their own homes.

"Most of them," Howze says, "had never seen a broom, and they carried them to their new American homes at Sledge, a strange land compared to Latvia, which in climate and terrain corresponds to Minnesota."

The bewildered, fear-ridden refugees, who first came from the German invasion then from the Russians, arrived in New Orleans with little more than the clothes they wore. A few spoke a little broken English, the others none. Howze met them, gave them their first meals, and carried them to their new American homes at Sledge, a strange land compared to Latvia, which in climate and terrain corresponds to Minnesota.

The farm houses which had been occupied previously by negro and white tenants were turned over to the newcomers, and Howze agreed to furnish all materials and tools, provided the occupants fixed up their own homes.

"Most of them," Howze says, "had never seen a broom, and they carried them to their new American homes at Sledge, a strange land compared to Latvia, which in climate and terrain corresponds to Minnesota."

MISSISSIPPI'S HIGH HEALTH STANDARD IS CHALLENGED

Mississippi's current high standard of health, which follows a medical history filled with stories of how new diseases were conquered and controlled, now faces new challenges, according to Dr. Felix J. Underwood, executive officer of the State Health Department, Jackson.

Dr. Underwood addressed the Gulfport Rotary club at its meeting Thursday night, Hotel Massena, defining the new challenges as the current increase of heart and blood vessel diseases, in cancer which are the leading cause of death in Mississippi.

"New challenges mean new weapons," he said. The vaccine, drugs and X-rays now in use are not much help in heart diseases and cancer, the head of the second half of the century are going to be much different from those of the first half, he stated.

The record of heart disease control in Mississippi has been remarkable, with tuberculosis and polio treatment facilities, vaccination against smallpox and widespread immunization against the more common ailments he said with few exceptions the state is able to avoid outbreaks of epidemic proportions.

Control measures in the "new challenges" are going to make the success of every weapon from vaccines and the better to the machine guns and the poison gas, Dr. Underwood said that heart and cancer diseases are the greatest health problems of the future because the development of advanced medicine and their application to the patient.

For the last 50 years, research groups will be on the trail of heart disease, cancer and the aging process, he said, and will require all the best of the first half of the century.

Gas dried them...guess the cost

Natural gas performs so faithfully and so well...we think you'll agree it's worth much more than it costs today.
Consider its use in a clothes dryer, for example—a full washer-load of laundry tumbled fluffy dry, in less than an hour, and in any kind of weather, for less than a penny!
And clothes drying is just one of many big jobs natural gas does in the home—cooking, heating, water heating, refrigeration, air conditioning.
When you stop to think that here in the Gulf South natural gas costs just about the same as it did 20 or 30 years ago, we think you, too, will say it's worth much more than it costs today!

More Signs of Progress in Rural Mississippi

The signs of progress in rural Mississippi are increasing: new crops, more scientific methods of fertilizing and conserving the soil, mechanical cultivation are seen everywhere. . . . And another indication of progress is the increasing number of rural telephones.

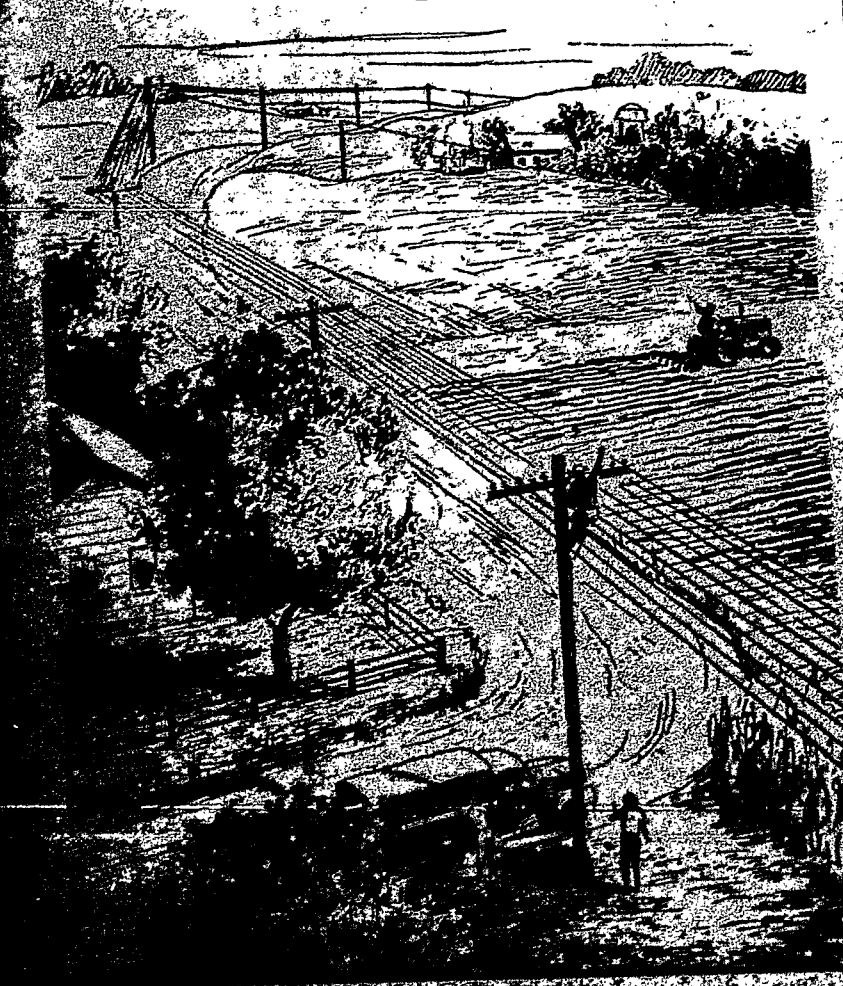

In 1945, there were 8335 rural telephones in Mississippi; today we have more than 34,000 of them.

This was brought about by a program of rural expansion and improvement in which Southern Bell invested over 11 million dollars in 7 years.

Southern Bell is now spending more than 2 million dollars a year for rural telephone expansion and improvement in Mississippi. . . . We have over 100 rural project in 50 counties of the state in various stages of planning or construction. . . . As the number of telephones increases the value of telephone service grows. . . . And growing telephone service helps keep America strong!

Mississippi Leads South in Traffic Death Reductions

Complete reports received from the National Safety Council today by the Mississippi Highway Safety Patrol show Mississippi with a 14 per cent reduction in traffic deaths for 1945 over 1944.

Virginia shows a reduction of 5 per cent, while all other Southern States show increases. The National average for total in all states shows a reduction of 4.4 per cent to 24 per cent, while Mississippi not only leads the South, our record is only exceeded by 5 states, which are:

Minnesota -24 per cent; New Hampshire -23 per cent; Iowa -20 per cent; Idaho -20 per cent; Connecticut -17 per cent; Mississippi -14 per cent.

Col. T. B. Birdsong, in commenting on how this record has been achieved, stated, "This has not been accomplished by any 'Flash in the Pan' Drive and hysterical methods of enforcement, but on the other hand has come about because of continued effort of all law enforcement agencies, both city, county and the Highway Patrol, working together for the same cause; also all educational agencies have contributed considerably, and then all Public Information Media, such as the Press, Radio, Motion Picture and Outdoor Advertising agencies have all done much, along with all civic organizations to bring about this reduction. Then each driver and pedestrian has contributed by driving and walking in a safer manner."

Birdsong stated in closing, "Despite our good record, we are still having too many persons killed on our streets and highways. With someone being killed every 14 hours of each day, and a serious injury every 15 minutes, then we must continue to improve our record. We must and shall do a better job with the continued effort and cooperation of all concerned."

Shrimp Catch Off Billion Waters Shows Increase

Shrimp catch off Billion waters totaled 10,789 barrels for July, according to figures released today by the Gulf of Mexico Fisheries Commission.

The figure represented an increase over June's 6,722 barrels, but was about 15 per cent off last July's catch of 12,244 barrels.

Dilly said the July catch was mostly brown shrimp or "brownies." He noted that August's open season in closed waters has not produced any increase in catches; in fact, the fishery is returning to the normal volume in search of more brownies.

"The Louisiana market has been producing any white shrimp yet," he said.

Star Theatre Offering 'The Winning Team' Sun., Man., Tues.

At the time Grover Cleveland Alexander, the young Nebraska farmboy with an early penchant for hurling rocks at tin can targets, reported to his first major league training camp with the Phillies of 1910, little did the sports world realize that this was to be the beginning of a new era in baseball; the breaking of old records, the setting of new. For here was the debut of a man soon to be hailed as Alex the Great, one of the most sensational pitching might in the history of Baseball.

Because a new generation of enthusiasts has sprung up since the days of the amazing Alex, his fame has taken on the form of a legend passed down through the years. Now for the first time, baseball and movie fans alike will have a chance to see the drama and background surrounding his fabulous career in Warner Bros. "The Winning Team," which opens Sunday, Monday and Tuesday at the Star Theatre.

Ronald Reagan, popular screen actor who is also an ardent baseball enthusiast appears as Alex. Doris Day is seen in the dramatic role of his devoted wife, and Frank Lovejoy plays Rogers Hornsby, dynamic manager of the St. Louis Cardinals in Alexander's day. For Doris Day the role marks another triumph following her success as Mrs. Gus Kahn in "I'll See You In My Dreams."

It was under the joint tutelage of Phillies manager Charles Sebastian (Red) Dooin and Dooin's right-hand man, Pat Moran, that Alexander quickly became the hit of the National League in his first year up. He won 28 games, something never duplicated in the Twentieth Century. In three seasons, starting with 1915, he won 30 or more games. Only Christy Mathewson was ever able to do the same.

WEEKLY NEWS LETTER

by
W. F. Bond, Director of Public Relations
State Department of Public Welfare

Mrs. J.'s husband died of tuberculosis leaving her with seven children under 16 years of age to support. She was given a grant of $50 a month by the Welfare Office and advised to have a health examination made of the children by a competent doctor. The result was that one child was put to bed for awhile and all of them were given shots for diphtheria, small pox, and typhoid fever. Fifty dollars a month was not enough to support the family, but by taking in washing and doing day labor whenever possible this family held together. The children were kept in public school and in Sunday School. The mother said that she did not know what would have become of her and the children had it not been for the financial help and wholehearted co-operation she received from the Welfare Department. A little money plus wise planning and encouragement means a lot to those in need.

If you wait for other people to do something for you, the chances are that you will be a long time waiting.
